Conference Over Express Companies' Petitions Comes to Nothing.

REVENUE MEN DON'T REPORT

Auditor's Office Will Get After Officials-Would Debate Big Problem.

No agreement was reached yesterday at the conference between the express companies, the representatives ofrlique shipping houses and the State Corporation Commission regarding the matters in controversy. This means that a formal hearing will be held. A petition will be filed by the express concerns, and later a date for a hearing will be fixed by all parties.

The application of the express companies doing business in this State is that the interstate regulations be made the Virginia regulations. They claim that they have of late years so nearly complied with the desires and rules of the Corporation Commission that the latter body ought to come across with the few remaining differences and make the general regulations of the companies the same.

Liquor Dealers Object.

Several points are thus involved, but it appears that no objection is forthcoming save from the liquor shippers, who say that the proposed rule in regard to the snipment of their goods.

It appears that no objection is forthcoming save from the liquor shippers, who say that the proposed rule in regard to the shipment of their goowould injure them a good deal. The express companies desire that when whiskey is shipped in small quantities
it should be packed, if in glass containers, in corrugated paper boxes, so as to protect it from breakage and consequent losses from damage. This is the point of contention.
Samuel L, Kelley and George A.
Hankon appeared for the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association. It soon became evident that there was no apparent possibility of getting together, and the informal conference was abandoned.
It is the custom of the commission to try to get contending parties together
informally prior to formal hearings
when possible.
